Kolkata 19th November, 2022: Kolkata Centre for Creativity, a multidisciplinary art space in collaboration with Paschimbanga Sangrahalaya Samiti (West Bengal Museum Association), Centre for Studies in Museology, University of Jammu and Vedic Studies Department, Rabindra Bharati University is pleased to organize the Durga Festival – intangible cultural heritage of humanity. This exhibition will be accompanied by National Seminars and Workshops to commemorate the World Heritage Week and the exhibition will be on view from 19 November to 25 November 2022, from 12:00pm – 5:00pm on the 4th floor at Kolkata Centre for Creativity.

Celebrated across the country as Durga Puja or Navratri, the festival surrounding the worship of the Mother Goddess is one of joy and piety. The same festival takes on various colours in different regions of the country from the northernmost part of the country, Jammu and Kashmir to West Bengal in the East. While Durga has been worshipped in J&K since ancient times as the ancient Durga idol (around 1300 years old) found in Budgam district suggests, the first recorded Durga Puja in West Bengal seems to have been celebrated by Bhabananda, the ancestor of Maharaja Krishnachandra of Nadia district in or about 1606 AD.

Durga puja broke free from pillared cortiles at Guptipara in Hooghly when twelve young men formed a committee and started Durga Puja, which is known as Barowari ('baaro-yaar-i' or of 12 friends) puja around in the 18th century. From being an extravagant private affair to becoming a festival for all, Durga Puja has gone through a massive evolution. The scale on which the Puja is celebrated in Kolkata has magnified exponentially over the years. The livelihoods of many artisans and craftspeople have come to depend on this festival. Clay modellers, dressers and the Malakars (The people of this community are expert shola craftsmen) who create and adorn the idols of the Goddess depend almost entirely on Durga Puja and spend months preparing for the festival. In fact, the Puja is a melting pot where people from all religions use their creativity and happily produce idols and sculptures of a largely Hindu Goddess.

UNESCO mentions on its website, "Durga Puja is seen as the best instance of the public performance of religion and art, and as a thriving ground for collaborative artists and designers... During the event, the divides of class, religion and ethnicities collapse as crowds of spectators walk around to admire the installations". Keeping up with the changing times and fashions, the very style of Durga Puja celebration has contemporised with the theme puja and its corollary, the art puja, coming into their own. The rich heritage of one of India's greatest festivals has now received greater worldwide recognition through UNESCO as Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity. Four Hundred and Ninety-Two elements from all over the world and fourteen Intangible Cultural Heritage elements from India are now on UNESCO's Representative List.

Through this exhibition KCC aims to preserve and promote this world recognised culture, and make make tangible this intangible heritage with the hope that the audience would be able to observe and ponder upon the rich cultural heritage of Durga Puja through the plethora of interpretations that are palpable through the various exhibits that more than the dozen participating organisations/institutions/individuals have showcased.

Celebrating the festive vibes of 'Durga Pujo', Birla Industrial & Technological Museum (BITM), Kolkata will have an interactive wall that plays the iconic sounds of the festival - the beat of 'Dhaak', the chime of 'Ghonta', the reverberations of 'Knashor' and the familiar hum of the 'Sonkho' - all at the wave of the hand! Maritime researcher Swarup Bhattacharyya, who has been documenting boat-making since 1999, will be displaying Dholai/Petnai, Kosa, Goluiya/Berli boats that are connected with Durga Puja. Kumartuli Museum will display a variety of terracotta implements and children's toys which were found 4 to 6 feet below the ground during an excavation. Sundarban Anchalik Sangrahashala will display Unnati Debi. Zoology department of Calcutta University is celebrating its centenary will display Lion, elephant and other animal Fetus. These are some of the highlighted artifacts and archival documents showcasing in the exhibition are
